2. RDM
3. PIVOT-RP
4. Research metrics
5. Systematic review service
6. Read and Publish Agreement

ORCID

ORCID: Open Researcher and Contributor ID

ORCID is an open, community-based registry of unique researcher identifiers linked to research outputs. Each researcher is identified by an ORCID number, a unique, 16-digit machine-readable number. Each ORCID should contain a listing of an author's research output.

An example: <https://orcid.org/0000-0001-5060-7706>

“ORCID provides a persistent digital identifier that distinguishes you from every other researcher” - <https://orcid.org>

Library Guide

<https://web.library.uq.edu.au/library-services/services-researchers/orcid-id-and-researcher-identifiers>

ORCID Usage Tips

- Submit manuscripts – publishers are adding ORCID IDs of contributors to a publication's metadata, correctly attributing your work to you
- Apply for funding – the Australian Research Council (ARC) has ORCID integrated into the grant submission workflow. Other funding bodies including the National Health and Medical Research Council (NHMRC), the US National Institutes of Health and the Wellcome Trust are requesting ORCID IDs from grant applicants
- Accept peer review assignments – you can be acknowledged for your contribution to the research community
- Renew professional memberships – organisations are increasingly using ORCID ID to help link and disambiguate members' identity
- Create your poster presentations – get your QR Code for your ORCID ID and include it on your poster
- Communicate with colleagues – add your ORCID ID to your email signature or business card

RDM – Research Data Management

RDM

The UQ Library supports the UQ Research Data Manager (UQRDM) to store and manage research data for research projects and share data with collaborators.

The following pages has links to the information about the RDM and how to use it.

<https://guides.library.uq.edu.au/for-researchers/uq-research-data-manager/using-uqrdmcloud>

RDM Website: <https://rdm.uq.edu.au/resources>

PIVOT RP

Pivot-RP is a searchable database containing over 28,000 active funding opportunities from sponsors in all disciplines.

All funding opportunities are tagged with Australian eligibility.

Applicant institution details (UQ) have been provided and results defer to this criterion.

<https://web.library.uq.edu.au/library-services/services-researchers/find-funding-and-opportunities-using-pivot-rp>

Research Metrics

Research metrics are numbers derived from citations of publications. You may be familiar with the H Index or FWCI (Field Weighted Citation Index) which are numbers based on all of career citations using different algorithms.

Research metrics is an area that the library provides support in to help in grant applications.

There is more information in the following website:

<https://web.library.uq.edu.au/library-services/services-researchers/metrics>

Systematic Review Service

The UQ Library has a number of supports for systematic reviews:

A library guide based on the steps of systematic review

<https://guides.library.uq.edu.au/research-techniques/systematic-reviews>

A systematic searching support service

<https://web.library.uq.edu.au/research-tools-techniques/search-techniques/find-everything-your-topic/systematic-searching-support>

Read and Publish Agreements

Read and Publish agreements progress the transition to open access publishing. UQ authors can publish their research in included open access titles without paying APCs. The Library funds open publishing via a combined access and publishing cost.

5. How to find guides

Library Training

The UQ Library provides regular training sessions and provides access to recorded training session as well.

The current training schedule can be found on the training page under Library Services

<https://web.library.uq.edu.au/library-services/training#keyword=;campus=;weekstart=>

The recorded sessions are available under software training resources.

For people based at the RBWH there are additional sessions on the services for hospital staff page

<https://web.library.uq.edu.au/library-services/services-for-hospital-staff>

Library Subject guides

Library guides are links to useful resources based on subject area or topic. They are good starting points for key books, databases and other resources in a subject area.

They can be found under Research tools & techniques

<https://guides.library.uq.edu.au/>
